

We share and lift up conversations, insights, and practices that encourage and support anyone working to build a more inclusive and equitable community.

BEFORE YOU BEGIN. KNOW:

- Our frame is local and community-centric. Community is a group of people who are geographically co-located and interdependent.
- The community already has all the assets it needs to become more inclusive and equitable. The orientation we bring is asset-based vs deficit-based. We honor and build on existing good work and progress.
- Broad-based community inequity is a wicked problem. One that is never fully solved. The problem definition depends on how you see the problem. Every action impacts another part of the problem. Progress is both value-centric and fact-centric, requiring many small iterative adjustments.
- The work of equity and inclusion requires both technical and adaptive leadership and solutions.
